

Feeling

Feeling

like a railroad-track glowing in the hot sands of a windy desert

Feeling

like a candle burning at daylight on a lonesome graveyard

Feeling

like a book lying closed and dusty on top of the backmost shelf in a huge library

Feeling

like a star glittering in the sky over downtown Las Vegas

Feeling

like a preacher praying with sincerest warmth in the cold cellar of an empty church

Feeling

like a teacher handing back a marvelous exam to an as yet untalented pupil

Feeling

like a scientist checking over and over the fundamentals of his revolutionary theory

Feeling

like a kid staring with big eyes and excited red cheeks in the window of a closed candy-shop

Feeling

like a messenger riding to a barbarian headquarter

Feeling

like a gladiator waiting defeated for the audiences judgment

Feeling

like a man loving a woman
